There are conflicting messages about security. On one hand we are told that all individuals without badges require an escort and on the other custodial staff that do not have badges to enter the suites to perform their duties are constantly knocking on the suite doors for entrance and we are expected to let them in. We often do not know the individuals and have to take their word that they are delivering something or checking printers/toner/shredders, etc. They should receive the appropriate badges and/or have an escort at all times.

				with Charles (the building manager) and Damien (the property supervisor). According to a thermometer and hygrometer I have in my cubicle, the temperature has been 80 degrees for the past few days. The humidity has been down to 30% and appears to be heading lower. I understand completely that individual preferences vary, but I believe that productivity suffers with temperatures this high. Humidity levels below 40% are causing discomfort, dry skin, and sinus problems for me and some of my colleagues. Everyone I've spoken to believes that it is too hot, and some even switch the individual units to a/c during the day to cool off. I understand that Department policy discourages use of small personal space heaters, and I assume that personal humidifiers would also be discouraged. However, if it continues to be this dry I'm seriously considering bringing one in. Can you help? Thanks very much, Anne O'Leary WAE Reviewer\A\GIS\IPS\CR-MPD \Rm. 2152\202-261-8726\Official \UNCLASSIFIED\ (END OF COPIED CORRESPONDENCE) Now it's summer and the temperature in my cubicle is about 82 degrees with 50% humidity. So, it's warmer than desirable (I find 73-77 degrees much better) and the humidity that I wish we had in the winter makes the high interior temperature quite unpleasant. I want to emphasize that all the individuals I contacted in the winter were very helpful, but I think the building is simply not designed for optimal balance between energy expenditure and comfort. We don't need great looking offices, and I'm a half time worker as a Re-employed Annuitant so I really don't mind the weird layout or my cubicle. But the temperatures and humidity are my biggest complaint. The second area of complaint is the decision to not supply paper towels in the bathroom. I understand that someone caused a major problem in the past, but it's pretty severe to punish everyone else. On my floor (the 2nd floor of SA-2) women just grab several toilet seat covers and use them instead of hand towels. This seems pretty crazy to me. I don't blame the landlord for not wanting to deal with another major and very unpleasant (filthy, from what I've been told) cleanup job, but I sure wish someone could have found the culprit rather than punishing the entire building's employees!

R_3EyCDT6xWBjdIyY	Department of State	Under Secretary for Management	Q26. Please provide any additional comments concerning your overall satisfaction.	Toiling in an open workspace makes it hard to complete tasks that require focus/concentration. This is especially bothersome when colleagues in neighboring cubicles have to make work-related telephone calls as part of their duties. It is also impossible to have private/personal conversations. Having a quiet room for phone calls is fine, but does not address the issue of needing to work without distractions on the computer at one's desk! It is time to rethink the open workspace plan.

My workspace is a single-person office, but either the walls or the overhead ceiling space carries the sound from adjoining offices. Offensive food odors also transmit easily. Other main problem is that because of old plumbing and careless fellow workers, they stopped providing paper towels in the restrooms. This would be OK if the electric hand dryers were better. Also when renovating the restroom they made the room darker and removed one of the two urinals. Seems strange.

There are no paper towels in the rest rooms. The security is compromised because employees who have access to section's entry door but don't work in our work space wander in frequently. Some of these folks dare not wearing the required "IPS Employee" Green badge with them. When asked they say that it is on their desk because they only take the badge necessary to open doors and not the IPS Identifier media. I never see the uniformed DSS officers roaming as they do in HST and other annexes.

From a safety perspective, this building is a death trap. Narrow steep stairs. Broken treads on stairs. Egress from only one door. Sealed windows. Paper everywhere. Abandoned furniture in the halls. Elevators that are problematic. Office suites that are set up like mazes. Fire warning systems that malfunction. Asbestos abatement has been done, but one would not really bet on other environmental hazards having been addressed. Heating and cooling break down with some regularity. Heaven only knows about structural integrity, given age of the building and its various renovations. Seems to me that when I am in front of the elevators on the 8th floor the building sways. And all that does nto even begin to address the functionality of the space, which is definitely problematic.

A few years ago we had a run of clogged toilets. Since that time we have not had paper towels in the restrooms; the explanation is that people were flushing them and that caused the toilet clogs. Now we have nice looking stainless steel hand driers. They are worthless. They give forth a might roar, but take an extended period to dry one's hands. We should either have paper towels restored or installation of the Dyson hand dryers that actually work-- as do many/most of the restrooms in the Truman building.

R_3sjloQTr2zWindW	Department of State	Under Secretary for Management	Q26. Please provide any additional comments concerning your overall satisfaction.	In winter and early Spring, the air is usually warmer than needed, especially in the three-person cubicle in which I work and which has very little partitions between workers. The building is just very old and not designed to accommodate the number of people we have. I am in a former conference room with two other employees because that is where they had space. The areas that important people would traverse are nice, the rest of the building is falling apart. The same sort of situation that many would ascribe to HST.

TSS Survey	Agency	Bureau	Question	Comment
R_Wx6gx0cw8jqDAYN	Department of State	Deputy Secretary for Management and Resources	Q26. Please provide any additional comments concerning your overall satisfaction.	It is a constant annoyance that there is a policy in this building of not providing paper towels in the restrooms (men's or women's). The electric hand dryers sound like saturnn-V rockets, deafening the users and making noise through the walls into office space, and worse yet, they don't even dry your hands! Apperantly there was once an issue with laborers flushing paper towels down the toilets and clogging them. Those laborers have moved on. We want to have either our paper towels back or new, quieter, more effective electric dryers. \Concerning overall satisfaction, this building is a decent place to work but not as clean as it should be - recent carpet-cleaning and paint have helped - but more dusting and general tidying-up could be done. The tidyness issue is on the employees who do not keep their work or common spaces in order, a mangement issue for not requiring that and a facilites issue for not providing the furniture to organize the amount of paper we have to deal with. The person we report facilites issues to is cranky and prickly - discouraging requests for improvements. Thank you.

Problem with delivery personnel not having cards to open doors, hence employees on the other sides of the doors have to open to the doors, then walk away from the personnel who might need escorts.
